News

Hiccup sat in her house, waiting for Toothless to come back home. So much had happened the last seven years, it's hard to believe they actually happened. And now, with the greatest news she'd ever gotten, her life just got much better. She remembered when they met. And not as a dragon, as a human.

Hiccup danced around the scratches that the dragon made with a branch. She moved lightly, her dark red braid twirling around as she took each step. Then she unintentionally bumped into the dragon.

_The dragon let out a brath that rustled her hair. Hiccup thought for a moment before letting her hand out again. _

_But the dragon growled, as if it were saying, "_How do I know I can trust you?"

Hiccup lowered her hand for a moment before saying, "You don't, but..." Again, she put her hand out, but his time, she looked away. "...I trust you."

She waited for something, anything. But she didn't expect to feel the palm a hand press against hers. She looked up and gasped.

_A boy stood in front of her, about her age. He wore a black tunic and leggings, and was barefoot. His skin was an ivory color, his black hair sticking up all over the place. He had the build of a strong teenager, not like how Snotlout keeps gloating about his "muscle." But scales lined his arms, feet, neck, and parts of his face. Even more surprising, black bat-like wings were folded against his back._

"Then I trust you, too," he said, his voice young and strong.

"You're... human..."

Hiccup smiled at how she first met him. As she waited for him to come back home, her fingers twirled around her ring. She remembered her wedding day perfectly; even she didn't expect it the way it happened.

_"That's for kidnapping me," Astrid said after punching her shoulder. _

Hiccup looked over at her boyfriend for support, but he simply shrugged while drinking water from the like in his dragon form. "It was your idea," he said, using his telekinetic powers to communicate.

Astrid gave a smile and walked away, before saying, "And thanks."

Hiccup blinked, a little surprised by the gratitude. "For what?"

"For kidnapping me," was all she said before bounding out of the cove.

_Hiccup gave a relieved smile and sat next to her boyfriend, who changed back into his human form. But then she lost it when she remembered what tomorrow was. _

"The Choosing..." she muttered, leaning her head against his shoulder. "The Nightmare..."

"I'm sorry about that," Toothless said, putting an arm and a wing around her for comfort. "We can still run away, you know."

"No," Hiccup said, shaking her head. "I need to do this. Maybe if I train the dragon, I can convince my dad that they're not what we think they are."

Toothless nodded. "Yeah." He snorted. "Besides, what would we even do? Get married?"

He laughed at his own joke, but Hiccup gave a serious look. "Why don't we?" she said softly.

"What?"

_"Why _don't _we get married?" Hiccup said. "We can get married, and if anything happens tomorrow, we'll at least be together!"_

"What? No! I was just joking!"

"Toothless..." Hiccup gave him a pleading face. She took his hands and brought them up to her. "Please? For me?"

Toothless' heart was pounding. Marriage? He never imagined such a fleet. He always thought that if he did find someone, it'd be with another Night Fury for the sake of his species. But that would be... selfish. Being with Hiccup, he found out what it was like to be accepted. Marriage... with Hiccup. Even if it's for a short time...

'No! Don't think like that! She'll get through it, and when she does, we can really be together... as man and wife.'

Toothless said, "I love you, Hiccup. And if that's what you want, then..." Getting down on one knee, he continued, "...will you marry me?"

Night Fury rituals were used for the wedding. There was the matter of their innocence, which Toothless wasn't sure of, but more of Hiccup's pleas made him go with it. The both woke up the next morning, married, no longer virgins. It was a miracle she didn't pregnant.

Hiccup smiled to herself, remembering her father's expression when she told him.

"I'm sorry," Stoick said, holding onto her daughter before she took off. "For everything."

"Me, too."

_"You don't have to go up there," Stoick continued, of concern for his daughter. _

"We're Vikings. It's a occupational hazard." She was about to take off when she decided to just blurt out, "Just thought you should know, I eloped the night before the final exam."

She quickly flew off before Stoick could say anything, but she couldn't help giggling at his shocked expression.

"Was that really a good idea?" Toothless asked as the took off.

"Honestly? Nope."

Stoick was giving Toothless quite a lecture when Hiccup woke up. She couldn't help but laugh to herself when she remembered his frightened expression.

"And how are you, dear?"

Hiccup looked up from her seat and saw her mother entering. "Fine. I'm just waiting for Toothless to come home."

Valka nodded. "Ah, yes. Big news. How do you think he's going to react?"

Hiccup shrugged. "I don't know. We've never really talked about it to be honest."

Then she remembered when she met her mom, her reaction to Toothless.

"Well, at least I'm not boring, right?"

Hiccup shrugged. "Well there is that one... specific... little... thing."

Valka directed her attention to Toothless, who was in his dragon form. He hadn't yet revealed his human form to her yet. "M-may I?"

"Uh, sure," Toothless said.

Hiccup smirked as Valka explored his reptilian body. She knew how much Toothless hated being touched unless it was by her.

"Retractable teeth! Wherever did you find him?"

"I found him in the woods. He was shot down and wounded."

_Then Valka went on to explain the different injuries from the other dragons. _

_"And what did your father think of your Night Fury friend?" _

Hiccup thought before answering. "He's actually more than just a friend. Toothless?"

Toothless looked up at the sound of his name. "Yeah?"

"You want to show her?"

Valka blinked. "Show me what?"

"Are you sure?"

"Positive."

Toothless nodded. He folded his wings against himself and a small glow peeked through. When it faded, he unfolded his wings and stood in his human form."

"Oh, goodness," Valka said, standing to take a closer look. "How marvelous. I've never seen anything like this."

"I doubt you _would've," Toothless said. He looked over at Hiccup and smiled. She stood up and walked over to him before placing a kiss on his lips._

Valka set her hand on her daughter's shoulder. "You father would be so proud of you."

"Hiccup? I'm home." Toothless' voice called from the next room.

"I'll leave you two," she whispered. As she left, Hiccup heard her say, "She has something to tell you."

"Alright, thank you, Valka."

Hiccup smiled as Toothless entered. "And how is my amazing husband?"

"Exhausted," Toothless said as he sat next to her. "My wings are aching. Barf and Belch and the twins were causing a ruckus in the forest. If anything, that was more chief material than Alpha material."

Hiccup shrugged. "I think you'll feel better with what I'm about to tell you."

"Long live the Chief! Long live the Chief! Long live the Chief!"

_Hiccup was nervous. she had just become chief. She didn't know if she can do this. Her father was a warrior, a brave and strong one. _

_"Hiccup." She turned at the sound of her voice. Hiccup," Toothless said again softly. "About your dad... I'm so sorry, I-" _

She stopped him by placing a kiss on his lips. "It wasn't your fault," she said, her voice a whisper. "It was Drago's." She placed her hands on his face and wiped a tear away from his cheek. "Promise me you won't blame yourself again."

"I promise."

"What'd you want to tell me?" Toothless asked, moving his hair out of his eyes.

Hiccup smiled. And when she told him, he smiled, too. Then it broke into laughter, and a tight embrace. Never again will things look down. Never again will they feel alone. Never again will they _be_ alone.

"I'm pregnant, Toothless."

Hallelujah, people! Another oneshot! Also, who else is excited for the premiere of Insurgent tonight? I can't wait to see it, my dad and I are going to the midnight premiere!

I'm a HUGE Toothcup fan. Of course, a Female Hiccup and Human Toothless. Yaoi is too... awkward for me. Also, has anyone seen any fics with a Female Toothless? I've never read any of those.

One last oneshot left then I'm out for a while. Maybe a month or so. Any ideas? I'm open to them!
